

10 Proven Social Media Prompts

Copy any prompt, fill the [BRACKETS], send. Mined from 500+ hours of top Claude builders.

1

Repurpose One Video Into Every Platform

One video becomes a content fountainhead; the Drafts-folder rule and the self-improvement note are what make this a reliable, repeatable engine.

Take this video – [YOUTUBE URL OR FILE] – and repurpose it into a LinkedIn post, an Instagram post, and an X post. Each should have a visual optimized for that platform. I've put my profile picture in the brand_assets folder – use it. Save everything to a Drafts folder for my review, never auto-publish. Then update your skill document with anything you learned from this first run.

2

Per-Platform Tone Instructions

Concrete platform-specific direction is what makes one source produce genuinely tailored content instead of lazy identical reposts.

When you repurpose my content, follow these platform tones: professional and value-led on LinkedIn; casual and a little humorous on X; an educational carousel for Instagram. For LinkedIn give me a clean key-takeaway graphic; for X an eye-catching quote card. Don't just repost identical text everywhere – genuinely tailor it per platform.

3

Deconstruct a Viral Post

You don't know why content blows up until you deconstruct it sentence by sentence — the recurring elements across winners are your proven blueprint.

Here's the transcript of a top-performing video in my niche: [PASTE TRANSCRIPT]. Deconstruct it: break down the first 20 sentences line by line. For each sentence tell me what was said and what it achieved (hook, relatability, curiosity gap, accessibility, proof). My goal is to reverse-engineer the psychology of why this is working.

4

Find the Winning Pattern

Comparing winners against losers surfaces the ~80% commonality that IS the proven, learnable content framework.

Here are transcripts from 4 of the best-performing videos in my niche and 2 poor performers: [PASTE ALL 6]. Repeat the line-by-line deconstruction on each, updating a shared framework as you go. Then tell me: what do the winners have in common that the losers don't? The roughly 80% commonality across all the winners is the framework I want.

5

Extract Your Tone of Voice

Anyone can make AI content — making it authentically sound like you is the differentiator; instruction-style guides make another AI replicate the voice.

I'm pasting in a batch of my real posts: [PASTE 10–20 OF YOUR POSTS]. Analyze them and create a tone-of-voice guide — but write it as INSTRUCTIONS to a language model to emulate my style exactly, not a description of it. Cover vocabulary, sentence structure, punctuation, and rhetorical patterns. Include good and bad examples. Keep it under 350 words.

6

Steal a Creator's Format (Not Words)

Produces a reusable playbook plus a ready post in a proven structure — copy template creators' hooks and structures, never their actual words.

Here are 10 recent posts from a creator in my niche: [PASTE POSTS]. Extract their playbook — their hooks, post structure, tone, and formatting — as a reusable template. Then write me a brand-new post on MY topic, [YOUR TOPIC], using their proven structure but in my voice. Don't copy their words, copy the shape.

7

Research-Grounded Post

Real-time research with real numbers grounds the post and gives it a data-backed hook instead of generic AI filler.

Write me a LinkedIn post about [TOPIC]. First, use web search to find recent, real information and data on it — I want the post grounded in current facts with real numbers, not generic claims. Then write a first-person, thought-leadership-style post with a strong hook, a brief reference to the source, and a clear CTA. Only output the post, no preamble.

8

Build a Validated Hook Bank

Hooks are everything in short-form — the first 3 seconds decide everything; remixing pre-validated hooks beats guessing.

Help me build a hook database. Here are hooks from posts and videos that already went viral in my niche: [PASTE PROVEN HOOKS]. Catalog them by type. Then, whenever I give you a topic, generate 3 hook options for it that remix these proven patterns — for example 'If you're a [AUDIENCE] struggling with [PROBLEM]...' Don't reinvent hooks; remix what's proven.

9

Comment-to-DM Lead Magnet

A proven format that drives huge engagement — comments boost the post in the algorithm while you harvest leads; the problem must align with the solution.

I want to run a comment-to-DM lead magnet. Help me script a short, low-effort value reel where the problem I create lines up exactly with the solution I'm offering, ending with 'comment [KEYWORD] below and I'll send it to you.' Then outline the automation: when someone comments [KEYWORD], DM them the link to [MY RESOURCE / COMMUNITY].

10

Daily Competitor / Niche Report

Solves content overload — automated research finds trends as they take off so you're ahead of competitors instead of scrolling for inspiration.

Build me a daily content-intelligence report. Every day, pull the top videos for my niche search terms, scrape my own recent video comments and bucket them into 'doing well / audience dislikes / audience requests', and check rising trends on Reddit and X. Score everything by recency and engagement, then deliver one scannable report of content ideas. I want ~90% of the value of doom-scrolling in a few minutes of reading.